

MID ATLANTIC NORTH

2025 OUTLOOK

The Mid-Atlantic North enters 2025 in a weird spot, with longtime NCFA Power Sacred Heart coming off the worst season of their existence. Will they return to form in 2025 or is this the year that Vermont or Clarkson can rise up and grab a division title. All three squads are a big of unknowns who will be relying a lot on incoming recruits to build strong 2025 seasons.

CLARKSON

GOLDEN KNIGHTS
CLARKSON UNIVERSITY

2025 OUTLOOK

Clarkson has been one of the most resilient teams in the NCFB these last few years, competing with some of the lowest numbers of any team in the league. Yet even with those numbers, they continued to be in games and have pulled out some victories. 2025 could be a season where they hit the next level and compete for a conference title

SACRED HEART

2025 OUTLOOK

Sacred Heart had their string of conference championships broken in last years 1-3 season and are looking to regroup and get back to the heights they are accustomed to as a former NCFA Championship program and perennial playoff qualifier. It will be reliant on their 2025 recruiting as they did not have the numbers or the horses they normally had last season. Be on the lookout for Sacred Heart to return to their normal spot at the top of the conference

VERMONT

2025 OUTLOOK

Vermont enters 2025 looking to get a foundation built, they have been dealing with low numbers these past few NCFA seasons but have been competing year in and year out. Will this be the year they score big in recruiting and put together the necessary roster to compete with Sacred Heart?

MID ATLANTIC SOUTH

2025 OUTLOOK

The class of the Mid-Atlantic sits here in the South division with George Mason, Columbus State and Coppin State planning on 2025 being their year to grab a National Title, while South Carolina looks to make the next step up and ruin a couple seasons to get themselves into the mix. George Mason has had some playoff experience but have yet to pull out a championship while Columbus State is looking at the change from the South Atlantic into the Mid-Atlantic as an opportunity to show the rest of the league what they can do. Coppin State looks to take the next step after a big 2024 season.

COLUMBUS STATE

2025 OUTLOOK

Columbus State for years had made the claim they should be considered among the NCFA's best with numerous seasons where they fell short of NCFA playoffs because of being in the same division as the eventual NCFA Champs. This season they get the chance to prove themselves in a new division. Longtime Head Coach Michael Speight believes this is the year they can jump on the NCFA playoffs and contend for that elusive championship trophy. Their roster is young and inexperienced but will bring new energy and tremendous potential. Look for CSU to be a breakout candidate for the NCFA playoffs

COPPIN STATE

2025 OUTLOOK

Coppin State was one of the big breakouts of the 2024 NCFA Season, going to the North Atlantic Championship game and qualifying for the NCFA Playoffs. They are looking to reload in 2025 and should be a contender once gain. Coach Herrera has put together a squad that they think can compete for the NCFA Title, they could be a prime team to keep the back to back championships only a Coppin State tradition by keeping OSU from it

GEORGE MASON

2025 OUTLOOK

George Mason has been on a historical run with 4 straight NCFB playoff appearances, they however have not had the opportunity to hoist the championship trophy at the end of a season quite yet. It a reload season for Mason in 2025 as they look to be an offensive force once again under Head Coach Orvin Weatherly. They are the clear Mid-Atlantic favorites as they look to hold off some of the upstart programs and see if this is the year they are able to finish the season on top

SOUTH CAROLINA

2025 OUTLOOK

South Carolina also makes the move from the South Atlantic to the Mid with hopes of jumping to the top of the conference. They are a few years into their rebirth now and looking to make a big jump in the standings this season